Personal History: Since 2006, I have learned from students, families, and communities while serving as a social science teacher and department chair, exceptional student education facilitator, athletic coach, adjunct professor, and educational programmer. In those roles, I worked to increase equitable education outcomes for youth in historically disinvested communities and youth in foster care. I am an educator and leader in secondary and post-secondary institutions. Currently, I am the founding Manager of the Office of Community Engagement and Partnerships in the College of Community Innovation and Education at the University of Central Florida. Through a relational approach, I demonstrate the ability to work with organizational leaders across multiple sectors to build strategic partnerships and manage collective impact initiatives that positively impact society. I serve on local and national boards that uplift youth, families, and communities. My board service includes: Need to Read Â an organization that gives resources and does parent training to promote preliteracy and literacy skills in Florida; Page 15 Â a literacy and empowerment program that encourages youth of all abilities to discover their own voice and write their own future; Leonard and Marjorie Williams Family YMCA Â located in the Packing District, this organization seeks to put Christian principles into practice through programs that build healthy spirit, mind and body for all. Most recently, I have been appointed to the Steering Committee of the Education Knowledge Broker Network, an organization that cultivates a professional learning community in education that is committed to democratizing the production and use of evidence in service of an equitable and just education system. Additionally, I have become a facilitator with the Peace and Justice Institute, a Central Florida organization that aims to awaken the culture of peace and justice - one person, one relationship, one community at a time so all can thri

Personal History: I have a strong background in community engagement, customer service, and leadership, which I believe make me an excellent candidate for board appointment. I am a dedicated advocate for positive change, having participated in initiatives like the Orange County Mayor's Citizen Academy and the Women on the Rise cohort. These experiences have enhanced my understanding of local government and strengthened my passion for serving the community. As a mother and a substitute teacher, I bring a unique perspective to addressing the needs of families and children, fostering inclusive and supportive environments. My commitment to lifelong learning, fitness, and wellness aligns with my desire to promote well-being and positive change. I am eager to collaborate with others, leverage my skills, and contribute meaningfully to the work of the board.
