Apopka Task Force on Violence Community Biopsy

A community often consists of people of different ethnicity, race, religion, caste, gender, health, wealth, and sexual orientation. Although communities may differ depending on the influence of culture and modernization, there some similarities in the challenges they encounter. Apopka is no different, the community focus groups coordinated by the task force identified problems and potential solutions relative to these challenges. The problems identified include mistrust between law enforcement and the community as well as a lack of jobs, education, self-identity, moral grounding, and spirituality. However, in addressing these challenges, it is important to examine and recognize long-term solutions. Therefore, this report seeks to provide specific recommendations related to education, crime, employment, moral grounding, and self-identity.

As a result of several community focus groups which included community residents, victims of crime, business owners, law enforcement, faith and community leaders. The community focus groups were facilitated by Bethune-Cookman University faculty and students. As a result of the input gathered from the community focus groups a five (5) Artery High-Risk community biopsy was conducted and the following prescriptive recommendations were offered.

A. Improve Community Safety (reduce crime and delinquency);

B. Improve relationships between law enforcement and community residents;

C. Provide an environment and venue conducive to the development of employability skills necessary for gainful employment;

D. Create jobs; and

E. Improve educational and vocational opportunities.

🔥 EDUCATION INITIATIVE

The need to allow parents to decide the best educational environment to allow their children to thrive academically must be a major priority. To this end, evidence based best practices and school choice programs should be considered to ensure children residing in impoverished crime ridden communities are afforded quality educational opportunities. A one size fits all approach must give way to innovative strategies in the administration of quality educational services for high-risk students and their unique challenges.

Introduce and implement an educational approach that recognizes the critical importance of Grades, Behavior and Attendance (GBA). Research has shown students who achieve in these areas (GBA) are less likely to become delinquent or drop-out of school. In contrast, students with poor GBA histories are more likely to become delinquent and subsequently penetrate further into the adult criminal justice system. A large segment of the 100,000+ inmates in the Florida Department of Corrections 2+ billion-dollar tax payer supported penal system have prior juvenile delinquent histories.

Expanding the accessibility of community based educational services, i.e., afterschool tutoring and G.E.D. services is an effort to increase positive educational outcomes for youth and young adults residing in high-risk community. The lack of quality educational support services negatively impact student learning outcomes. Students from low income families and communities, similar to some of the high-risk neighborhoods in Apopka and Pine Hills would benefit from expanding educational support opportunities through the utilization of existing underutilized faith and community based institutions. These services would be afterschool tutoring, parental support guidance, mentoring, etc.)

These institutions can serve as a support to students, parents and local schools in the effort to ensure positive educational outcomes. Improving teacher, student, and parent relations is a crucial to improving the effectiveness of education in a community. When teachers and group of students have good relationship, both the teacher and students enjoy teaching and learning more. When schools prove to be chronically failing, parents should have the option to choose better performing schools for their children regardless of whether private or public schools.

Thus the following should be considered:

1. Examine the feasibility of implementing evidence based school choice opportunities for high-risk youth attending low performing schools;

2. Provide funding for faith and/or community based afterschool tutoring programing;

3. Provide funding for gender specific mentoring services;

4. Increase the utilization of pre K services for qualified children residing in high-risk communities.

GOVERNMENT RESOURCES ACCOUNTABILITY

The equitable distribution of government resources is critical to impacting the lives of residences, especially in high-risk communities. Government accountability includes the following:

1. Provide economic development and home ownership opportunities for the affected community residents through the utilization of the "Community Redevelopment Act" (CRA), which was established to address the "slum" and "blighted" areas through redevelopment strategies that may include infill / affordable housing programs, small business grants, public-private partnerships to create jobs, etc.;

2. Ensure representation of all tax payers inclusive of jurisdictions affected by crime and poverty;

3. Limit the growth and reach of government as it relates to tax increases; and

4. Institute an equitable formula as it relates to infrastructure development irrespective of race and/or socio-economic status.

🔥 CRIME / YOUTH PREVENTION INITIATIVE

As a result of the Task Force on Violence community workgroups, there were many opinions expressed regarding the issue of violence within the community based on the feedback which is reflected in the community work papers. It was expressed that when adequate resources are directed and focused within the affected communities, the calls for law enforcement services and response to school based on misbehavior were reduced. This is a measurable indicator that provides a return on tax payer dollars which reduced referrals to juvenile justice entities as well as child welfare organizations due to abuse and/or neglect. It is requested that state and local government support the following areas:

1. Juvenile delinquency prevention funding;

2. Adult probation jobs training and coaching community based re-entry indoctrination;

3. Institute a "Neighborhood Accountability Board" (NAB) and Civil Citation Programs;

4. Gang interdiction funding for local programming;

5. Substance abuse counseling services; and

6. Mental Health counseling services.

7. Develop foster home capacity of high risk communities for at-risk behavioral modality youth as an alternative to transitioning into delinquency more costly modalities; and

🔥 JOBS INITIATIVE

Common themes expressed through out each of the community workshops included poverty, the willingness and acceptance of employment opportunities as an alternative to idled time, susceptibility of the use and/or abuse of illegal substances, and succumbing to negative peer pressure.

There are several reasons given for unemployment, including the lack of vocational skills and soft skills development in addition to the lack of personal motivation. This is true for adults and age appropriate youth.

The following recommendations were offered:

1. Provide community based funding to create job coaching and workforce development services for at-risk youth and young adults, (i.e., - juvenile/adult probation workforce development initiatives that are community based);

2. Provide funding for community based job training and placement assistance;

3. Secure financial support from Career Source to implement community based level job training and coaching; and

4. Funding for youth aging out of foster care specifically for jobs training and placement services.

"Jobs/Employment changes behavior"

🔥 COMMUNITY & LAW ENFORCEMENT RELATIONSHIP

To promote and improve community and law enforcement relationships, the task force is requesting state funding from the Department of Community Affairs to support law enforcement agencies serving the Apopka and Pine Hills Community. This funding will be designated to support citizen driven and community-based entities that will work collaboratively with law enforcement to achieve specific goals and objectives related to developing a culture of communication. This will result in increased community safety, collaboration and decrease in unsolved crimes.

Community policing encourages law enforcements participation as a valuable community stakeholder which establishes a heighten professional familiarity with community residents and promotes a proactive exchange of communication with the public. With community policing, the emphasis is on preventing crime before it happens, not responding to calls for service after a crime occurs. Community policing has numerous benefits to include bringing the community together, deterring crimes, educating the community, increasing commitment to the community, changing perception, and building a culture of trust between community residents and the law enforcement. Open dialogue is critical to the successful implementation of a community policing approach. It allows members of the community to better understand the duty-bound actions of law enforcement which may assist in diminishing the historical view of being negatively profiled, abuse of authority, disrespected, and the sense of being publicly humiliated during lawful stops. This approach is predicated on community residents sense of obligation of abiding by the laws of the land, respecting the legal authority of law enforcement and understanding the overall end objective of any interaction with law enforcement for both parties involved in, "Surviving the Stop".

Apopka Task Force on Violence Community Biopsy

Summary Legislative Request:

The Community Taskforce on Violence and Apopka Ministerial Alliance has taken a position to be responsive in the delivery of services that directly impact their community. It is further believed that faith & community based organizations can better deliver these services with a greater return on investment. Upon reviewing the legislative priorities of the Governor, Florida House and Senate leadership, it is believed this legislative proposal is of local and statewide interest and therefore humbly request the support and assistance to ensure real and measurable outcomes are achieved through this innovative legislative funding request.

It is requested that legislative support be given to this holistic and first of its kind state legislative budget request (LBR) that has significant statewide interest and implications relative to combating issues that are NOT unique to Central Florida. In an effort to ensure that there is local investment in securing a return on taxpayer investment (ROI), this initiative will also be requesting a twenty (20%) percent match from the two affected local government municipalities based on a pro-rated share of jurisdiction (see below).

State Government Legislative Appropriations Request:

➢ Department of Juvenile Justice Funding	$250,000.00
➢ Department of Children & Families Funding	$250,000.00
➢ Department of Education Funding	$250,000.00
➢ Department of Elder Affairs Funding	$250,000.00
➢ Department of Corrections Funding	$250,000.00
➢ Department of Health Funding	$250,000.00
Total:	$1,500,000.00

Local Governments 20% Matching Funds Request:

➢ City of Apopka	(55%)	$165,000.00
➢ Orange County Government	(45%)	$135,000.00
		$300,000.00

It is requested that the funding allocation from each of the aforementioned agencies be journal transferred (JT'ed) to the Department of Economic Opportunity as the umbrella agency to administer funding for this legislative request. It is understood that each state agency may have different reporting standards and if this request is approved, adherence to each respective agency's reporting standards will be maintained.

In anticipation of the Apopka Task Force's requested legislative appropriation being approved by the Florida State Senate and House, and subsequently approved by the Governor, a high quality and reputable not-for-profit organization will serve as the fiscal agent.

This initiative will establish measurable thresholds to determine the ROI, as well as, the performance of a mid and annual year evaluations. Each funded area will also be mandated to participate in at least one (1) quality assurance examination to ensure service delivery best practices are being executed as well as to explore and document unrealized service delivery innovations.

Thank you for your serious consideration of, "Making High-Risk Communities Great!"

Recommendations

1.) Strengthen the relationship and bond between law enforcement and the community

A consistent concern expressed during all three (3) of the community focus group sessions was the need to improve the relationship between law enforcement and the community. To this end, it is recommended that specific and targeted training involving community residents and local law enforcement professionals (city and county). It is further recommended that the proposed training be delivered in three distinct but related phases. The three phases are outlined below.

Phase 1: Community Residents - This training is designed to examine and address the mistrust by the community as it relates to law enforcement. The training will examine perceptions and attitudes of the community towards law enforcement from an historical perspective. Training participants will be provided an in-depth overview of the hiring process and training of law enforcement professionals. The training will also explore the goals and objectives of law enforcement in delivering services to the community. Participants will also participate in role playing scenarios depicting the situations law enforcement professionals encounter while serving the community. The purpose of this training component is to provide community residents with a understanding of the role and perspective of law enforcement professionals in ensuring the safety of the community.

Phase 2: Law Enforcement Professionals - This training is designed to introduce and provide effective interpersonal communication strategies for law enforcement professionals. The training will include an examination of barriers to effective interpersonal communication as well as de-escalation strategies to resolve or prevent communication conflicts. Training participants will explore the influence of individual cultural rules, values, and beliefs on human interactions and perceptions. The training will also seek to promote the importance of mutual understanding and respect between law enforcement and the community.

Phase 3: Community Members & Law Enforcement Professionals- This training is designed to provide community residents and law enforcement professionals with an understanding and awareness of each other's role in ensuring the safety and security of the community. The training will focus on enhancing the mutual accountability and responsibility between law enforcement and the community in order to provide a safe environment for the children and families of Apopka.

It is further recommended that consideration be given to the utilization of private security resources in documented and persistent high crime areas. Personnel must be well trained in the area of community engagement and solution oriented services. This strategy may prove to be a cost-effective approach in the effort to increase public safety in high crime and disadvantaged areas. Private security visibility can serve as a deterrent and provide extended eyes and ears in the high-risk communities.

2.) Promote jobs

Neighborhood Youth & Adult / Juvenile Probationer Workforce Development Initiative:

1. Governor Scott has invested tax payer dollars as well as his own political capital in building his reputation as "Florida's Jobs Governor". He has been successful in creating 1 million plus jobs over the past 6 years. We encourage a similar focus on business development and job creation targeted towards high-risk neighborhoods. Various studies show that viable employment curbs violent behavior and we would highly encourage and invite a similar focus of business development and job creation targeted in high-risk neighborhoods. Employment is denoted as a positive risk factor that impacts the susceptibility of criminal and delinquent behavior in impoverished communities. Several factors impacting viable employment opportunities in high-risk communities are presented below.

    a. High-risk neighborhood youth are in desperate need of soft skills training that would provide critical skill sets. This was a common theme discussed during the taskforce community workshop sessions. Both youth and adults expressed a concern about the increased acts of crime, specifically violent crime.

    b. Adult and juvenile probation offenders are also a target population residing in high-risk communities and in need of soft skills job training, job coaching and job placement services.

    c. Community Redevelopment Act (CRA) resources should be utilized to support the various designated areas within the CRA boundaries. CRA support will make available resources such as cost free community center access to hold community meetings, and other related events.

3.) Promote and Encourage Educational Achievement

One of the major themes during the Apopka Taskforce youth focus group forum was the lack of educational support at home and sometimes, at school. Some of the youth also expressed a concern that many of their fellow students exhibited little or no interest in school. Current and past research points to the relationship between the lack of educational achievement and delinquency involvement.

Currently, disadvantaged children and their families have less opportunity to experience complementary learning than their more affluent peers. Thus, they do not experience the rich set of learning opportunities that research suggests is essential to positive learning and developmental outcomes, which further widens the achievement gap. This is also true for family involvement, where we see differential patterns in involvement based on socioeconomic factors as well as educator outreach. The same applies to access and participation in after-school and summer learning programs, where we see differences in participation based on socioeconomic status.

As a means to supporting family engagement and children's learning, it is crucial that programs implement strategies for developing partnerships with families (Henderson & Mapp, 2002). These strategies should be appropriate for the diverse population programs serve and reflect a commitment to outreach (Colombo, 2006; Crawford & Zygouris-Coe, 2006). A systemic approach to supporting the role of families in their children's learning is essential. Parents who are involved early and throughout school years have children who are more likely to enter school ready to succeed and to graduate and go to college. Further, families play a critical role in accessing and sustaining participation in a network of quality learning supports. Many families lack the social and political capital necessary even to know about, let alone make good choices in, learning opportunities for their children. Thus, a systemic approach to family involvement is one that helps families understand the value of continuous learning of all kinds and offers the network of supports necessary for that learning.

To address the issues related to the lack of educational support and achievement among at-risk youth residing in the Apopka community, the following recommendation is offered.

a. Solicit the support of local faith and community-based agencies to implement afterschool educational programs. Given the fact that these institutions have historically served communities and neighborhoods plagued by crime, delinquency, and educational deficits, they can and should play a more vital role in addressing these issues identified by the taskforce. While it is customary for faith instructions to serve its congregation on Sundays, the need for these institutions to provide educational and youth development support during the week is needed now more than ever before. It is therefore recommended that increased efforts and funding be directed to local faith and community-based organizations to target high-risk youth and neighborhoods within the Apopka community.

4.) Provide Delinquency and Crime Prevention Services (Mentoring, Sports, & Arts)

The Apopka Violence Prevention Taskforce was created out of a growing community concern for the alarming rise in homicides in Apopka at the beginning of 2016. The issue of crime and violence in specific areas of the Apopka community emerged as a topic of discussion during each of the three (3) community focus groups hosted by the taskforce. According to the information obtained during the focus groups, it was consistently recognized that high levels of crime and violence negatively impacted family stability, community safety, and meaningful employment opportunities. The need to adequately address crime, violence, and delinquency is critical to improving the life choices and chances of youth and young adults residing in Apopka. The notion that there is a singular solution to addressing the multifaceted issues associated with crime and violence is naive. Such a view tends to lead to a Band-Aid approach that ultimately fails due to a lack of understanding the true underlying issues. For this reason, the following multidimensional recommendations obtained from the taskforce are offered.

1. Provide intentional, targeted, and structured mentoring opportunities for youth and young adults residing in high-risk neighborhoods. The Social Learning Theory holds that behavior occurs as a result of the interplay between cognitive and environmental factors. Noted scholar Albert Bandura theorized that behavior is learned from the environment through the process of observational learning. Children observe the people around them behaving in various ways.

   It is recommended that consideration be given to implementation of the Situational Environmental Circumstances (SEC) Mentoring Model. The SEC Mentoring Model is rooted in the Social Learning Theory. The modeling process by which individuals learn through observing others, intentionally or accidentally, serves as the underpinning for the SEC Mentoring Model. The SEC is premised on the fact that the selected mentors (college students) will typically hail from the same or similar environments and family structures as the youth being mentored. This shared life experience makes the mentors uniquely qualified to serve as role models. Providing mentees a model of how a young person should conduct themselves in various settings (school, family, community, etc.) is consistent with the principles of the Social Learning Theory. The SEC Mentoring Model is currently being implemented under the auspices of the Florida High-Risk Youth Delinquent and Dependent Youth Educational Research Project. The project is managed by Florida State University and includes project sites at each of Florida's Historically Black Colleges and Universities, as well as, other higher learning institutions.

2. Implement structured prevention and intervention programs in the Apopka community. Such programs should include Neighborhood Accountability and Civil Citation Programs. Identifying and preventing youth who are at greatest risk of system involvement or effectively intervening with youth at the initial stage of juvenile justice system involvement is critical to community safety. Research has shown the earlier a youth becomes involved in the delinquency the greater the chances of continued system involvement as an adult. The Neighborhood Accountably Program (NAB) focuses on youth who have not been formally identified by law enforcement as a delinquent youth, but who displays behaviors that may place him/her at high-risk of delinquency involvement. In contrast, the Civil Citation Program seeks to intervene with youth who have been identified as delinquent. However, the youth is given the opportunity by law enforcement to avoid being formally processed and entered into the juvenile justice system if the youth completes agreed upon sanctions. Both programs are community-based and require structured community-based services. Many of these institutions have established relationships in the community. Given that faith- and community-based organizations tend to be located in or near high-risk areas, these institutions can be ideal partners in the delivery of prevention and intervention services offered by Neighborhood Accountably and Civil Citation programs.

3. Increase opportunity and support for youth to participate in extracurricular activities, to include sports and the arts. Youth that are involved in extracurricular activities are less likely to engage in delinquent behavior. After-school hours are the peak time for juvenile crime and risky behaviors such as alcohol and drug use. Most experts agree that after-school programs offer a healthy and positive alternative. Research has supported the notion that the type of daily activities that one partakes in and the peers around them can affect involvement in delinquency. Structured after-school activities have the presence of organization while creating specific roles that can make adolescents responsible for social control and offer fewer opportunities for delinquency. Such programs also tend to include character development and positive youth development opportunities. (Burton & Marshall, 2005; Landers & Landers, 1978; Osgood et al., 1996).

4. Increase efforts to engage faith- and community-based organizations in the delivery of the services identified in recommendation #1, #2. And #3 above. As previously noted, these institutions tend to be located in or near high-risk areas, these institutions which makes them ideal partners in the delivery of prevention, intervention, character development, and extracurricular services.

5) Community & Government Accountability

Community Accountability:

High-Risk community residents have expressed concerns about the increased acts of crime. Unfortunately, the psychological affects of the prevalence of violence in high-risk communities is all too often not diagnosed to the extent that post-traumatic stress disorders (PTSD) go untreated thus exacerbating the issues of violence.

To increase Community Accountability the follow must be addressed.

   a. High-Risk community residents interested in taking ownership of what happens in their community should receive sustainable supports, such as cost free community center access to hold community meetings, with specific goals and community targeted agenda items to address.

   b. High-Risk communities must embrace and develop a culture of communication and disclosure with reporting what they believe to be law violations to area law enforcement. This law abiding culture of communication must permeate throughout the community at every age, gender, and ethnicity level.

Government Accountability:

The issue of government accountability for Apopka is both unique and complex in that the lack of such accountability appears to contribute directly to certain problems within the City. The two major issues are.

   a. The first example is the historic case of Dowdell v. City of Apopka, where Charles R. Scott, Senior District Judge with the U. S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida, ruled in the favor of the plaintiffs in a class action lawsuit based on racial discrimination against the City of Apopka. The class of plaintiffs consisted of African-American residents of an area known as South Apopka. Judge Scott found disparities in the distribution of resources to African-American residents. As such, South Apopka residents were not receiving services related to: 1) paving & maintenance of streets; 2) storm water drainage facilities, 3) water distribution system; 4) Sewerage facilities; and 5) park recreational facilities.

   b. The second, is the interlocal agreement between Orange County and City of Apopka regarding annexation. Orange County Government has initiated several community based initiatives to address issues that impact disparity, which again the Task Force contends these disparities contribute to violence, poor education, as well as the lack of jobs and economic development opportunities. Economic development or redevelopment efforts would promote the creation of economic growth opportunities, which in turn would address the root causes of violence in the community. Critical opportunities to promote such economic growth exists with the Apopka Community Redevelopment Agency (CRA), which pursuant to Chapter 163, Part III, was created to address "slum" and "blighted" areas, as well as provides the ability to support community policing programs and promote public-private partnerships to establish opportunities for economic growth in the underserved portions of the City through the use of CRA funds.

The need exists to utilize a triage approach to prioritize the utilization of CRA funding to divert its use away from non-essential items, such as streetscapes, when these resources could be put to better allowable uses to develop small businesses, increase community policing programs, or provide affordable housing options through infill or first time homebuyer assistance programs within the CRA boundaries. As one example, to facilitate greater community pride and participation, which will in turn promote much needed economic development and redevelopment opportunities, the Apopka CRA funds could be used to create an infill housing program that will identify areas where affordable housing may be instituted to provide funding to first-time home buyers or qualified residents for down payment assistance. Infill housing programs can effectively improve the conditions of the residents, as well as attract small businesses and/or corporations into the area to ignite the engine of economic growth and development. Should it be found that the Apopka CRA Plan does not address the specific needs of the community to address the "slum" and "blighted" areas, efforts should be undertaken to amend the CRA Plan as permitted by Chapter 163, Part III.

Lastly, a critical review of fair and competitive government contracting that would provide greater financial opportunity for small area businesses to grow and create jobs within the local community. This is inclusive of allowing local businesses to compete for tax payer dollars thus providing a path forward for women, minority, and veteran owned businesses. Note: Orange County Government has a highly-recognized minority business certification initiative that does not fund a special set aside for minority businesses. Despite not having a special fund for minority businesses, Orange County Government has a demonstrated history of small business success that warrants duplication in the Apopka community that would directly impact high-risk communities. An additional benefit to Orange County's CBE initiative, is that it incentivizes "prime contractors" to partner with "Certified Women, Minority & Veteran owned businesses" by awarding additional points scored on bid solicitations to secure tax-payer government contracts.

If people's perception of youth is negative, what can we do to improve the image of youth?	❖ Worked at Apopka middle & the community problems were brought in the school and was reflected in student's behavior ❖ Black students are automatically stereo typed and are already labeled "bad" students which causes them to be belittled ❖ Empower them as teachers and administrators instead of putting them down ❖ Choices/decisions determine success; environment doesn't define success
